British Post Office Is Now 300 Years of Age

The British post office has reached the mature age of three hundred years. The king telegraphed his congratulations to the postmaster general, who, in turn, telegraphed the message to the 21,000 post offices throughout the country.

It was in 1635 that Charles I issued a commission to Thomas Witherings, Esquire, to organize the internal mails of the country. These had, up to then, been carried in haphazard way by anybody. There had been a makeshift system for royal correspondence to and from the court, but private mail was delivered only as a sideline.

Witherings accordingly set up regular posts along the five main post roads out of London—to Edinburgh, Norwich, Bristol, Exeter and Holyhead. The posts were dispatched once a week. For a single letter one sheet of paper folded—there were no envelopes in those days—the postage was for under 80 miles, two pence; for under 140 miles, five pence; for over 140 miles, six pence; to the Scottish border, eight pence. All letters were sent through London and all postage was paid there.

The total staff then numbered 47. Today the London staff alone with mails only is more than 35,000. The post office of 1635 handled 20,000 letters a week. That of 1935 deals with 20,000,000 a day.

Dinosaur Marks Found on New England Cliff

Rumney, N. H.—Footprints of a giant prehistoric animal, possibly of the dinosaur family, have been discovered on a cliff behind the summer home here of George C. Fredh.

The marks of the clawlike tracks measure 16 inches from toe to heel. The discovery supports the contention of scientists that Pleistocene monsters 60 to 70 feet tall once roamed this district.

Alive? He Has Much Trouble Proving It!

Prague.—A Bohemian farmer is trying hard to prove that he is alive—so far without success.

Unless Robert Diorant, of Zatec, can satisfy the authorities that he is living, his "widow" will have to pay inheritance taxes on her "late" husband's estate.

When his wife received the demand for taxes, her husband protested to officials that he was alive.

The officials replied that there must have been some error somewhere, but pointed out that they were in no position to make the necessary correction unless Gueral could produce a certificate proving that he really was alive.

The fact that the parish church at which Gueral was baptized and married did not mention his death in its register was not accepted as proof that he was still living.

Father Darkleaf

Father Darkleaf has never been to a cat show, but we note from a New York news item that the recent exhibit of the Empire Cat Club, and the Solid Color Cat Society, that an Abissinian cat stole the show. Yes, the Abyssinian influence is sweeping the country. Right here in Appomattox we are beginning to feel it. Justin Burkey says his Christmas window is a scene from Abyssinia.

We read that the new First Secretary of the British Embassy at Washington is named, Mr. M. Vyyyan. Yowsah, but what does one call him for short?

Suggested game: Give each one in the room a pencil and paper and see who can write down the names of the most counties in Virginia. So far, I have been able to get up to 81.

Lights of New York
by L. L. STEVENSON

"Are you forty years of age?" Lewis J. Valentine, commissioner of police, inquires on placards in B. M. T. subway trains. Then the boss of all of New York's cops continues: "In over one-half of all the fatalities caused by motor vehicles on our streets, the victims are over forty years of age. The principal causes are: Crossing against traffic lights, crossing not at crossings. When young, one is taught to utilize increasing power. After middle age, one should educate one's self to take care of diminishing power and alertness. Learn to grow old safely and happily." And I'm wondering if all those who read those placards, after leaving the trains, actually wait for the traffic light to change before crossing the street.

The relationship of subways to J. P. Morgan more than likely goes to entitled behind securities of operating companies, if that much, since Mr. Morgan is never seen among us sardines. Nevertheless, the fact remains that he is still the heaviest individual taxpayer in Glen Cove, Long Island. His assessment this year is $1,435,000. Mrs. Pinchecock, his island estate, is assessed at $985,000. The assessment of his son, Junius S. Morgan, is $526,500 and that of his son's wife, $50,000, while Mrs. Francis T. Pemoyer, his daughter, is assessed at $170,000. As a family, however, the Morgans are topped by the Pratts with a total assessment of $5,385,005. Somehow or other, it doesn't seem right to tack on that extra $5.

Bill darling here and there, we come upon Miss Bea Gottlieb. She sailed for Europe recently and took with her the hope that she might have a game of golf with none other than His Royal Highness, the Prince of Wales. Curiously enough, Miss Gottlieb may have a chance. It may be remembered that three years ago an American girl achieved international fame because of the fact that the prince watched her play golf, admiring her swing, arranged for a match. Not only was the match played but the prince was defeated by the American. And that American girl was Miss Bea Gottlieb

Then there is Mrs. Mabel Brevoort Stevens who achieved local fame. She did it by raising eight bunches of muscat grapes on top of an apartment house down in Old Chelsea. To make the garden in which the grapes have grown, ten tons of earth had to be raised 16 floors, which is quite a chore and a bit expensive, too. Mrs. Stevens is an experienced city gardener. When she lived on Beekman place, one year she raised 23 bunches of grapes on the same vines. They were transplanted two years ago. The new vines didn't let them any good as they refused to bear until this summer. Mrs. Stevens also has a flower garden, and is hopeful to grow fruit trees against the brick wall of the building.

Back from a Maine vacation, Irving Rubine told me of a Yankee who reminded him of the tale of the Arkansas resident who didn't repair his roof because the hole didn't make any difference when it didn't rain and when it did rain, he couldn't fix it. Up at Camden, there is a gentleman who allowed his house to fall into ruin and when it reached such a state it wasn't habitable any longer, he put up a tent in the back yard and is now dwelling in that.

The intersection of Amsterdam avenue and Sixty-second street seems to be a dangerous corner for Detective Thomas Mason of the police narcotic squad. The other night, despite his tramp disguise, he was recognized at that corner as a cop and shot in the hand. Last winter, he probably saved his life by beating the other fellow to the draw and shooting him. A few months earlier, he was stabbed seriously. Nevertheless, in the last few weeks, he and his partner, Charles Lennan, have made 22 arrests in that vicinity.

Moby Dick Role Thrust Upon Young Fisherman

Vineyard Haven, Mass.—Wilfred Pratt, twenty-five-year-old fisherman, received the leading role of Moby Dick while swordfishing.

Pratt was to bring the swordfish back to the mother boat after it had been harpooned and tired. His line became entangled about his feet in the dory when he came alongside a fish just exhausted. The fish dived suddenly and dragged Pratt with it.

After he had been recovered from the depths of water he had no idea how far he went down before he cut himself loose.

New Payment To Tobacco Signers Is Announced Today

BUY CHRISTMAS SEALS

Lighten Their Climb Back to Health

A minimum payment for 1936 to fire cured tobacco growers at the rate of 1.00 per 100 pounds of base tobacco production was announced today by the AAA, we learn just as we go to press.

This payment will be made to growers as soon as possible after the new contracts are signed. The growers who fail to comply with the contract in 1936 will refund the payment.

Additional payments under the new contracts will depend upon the price of tobacco each year, and and will be an amount which, when added to the farm price, will tend to bring the growers returns to not less than parity on the quantity of fire cured tobacco used domestically.

County agent R B Hudgins adds that in many cases this new payment will amount to more than enough to pay the grower's taxes.

He'll Be In Appomattox

Here's news for all the boys and girls.

Santa Claus will be here in Appomattox in person on Saturday, December 21 and on Christmas Eve.

And, secondly, the Times Virginian invites you all to write your letter to Santa and have it in our hands by next Tuesday and we will print it next week's paper.

Expect Payment

A rental payment on the 1935 tobacco crop in this county, amountinb to nearly $15,00, is expected to be received before Christmas.

Girl Speeder Gets Trip Through Morgue

San Francisco.—A trip through the morgue is worse than a jail sentence.

Thus, in a jittery voice, Violet Rudolph, twenty-four, protested against the sentence imposed upon her by Municipal Judge Elmer Robinson for reckless driving.

The judge ordered her to view bodies in the morgue as a "lesson." She was escorted by a deputy coroner into the autopsy room and the "icebox" where bodies are kept pending investigations. The girl nearly fainted several times.

"I'd rather spend 100 days in jail than go through this again," the girl said.

Salesman Quits 5-Year Job as Bullet Buffer

Toledo, Ohio.—"Cap" E. E. Richardson, the most shot-at-and-hit man in Lucas county, had to throw it all over because his insurance company got nervous.

For the last five years Richardson, a police equipment salesman, has been conducting personal demonstrations of his bullet-proof vests, firing wary at himself when no one else would take the risk of holding the gun.

The last time "Cap" was shot he had put on the vest of a competitor to prove he wasn't cheating in a tin vest for the sake of comparison with his own.

"That was the worst beating I ever took from a bullet," said Richardson. "It burned and stung my whole left side."
